For Internet Explorer 8 or earlier, the only difference is that Internet Options is under the Tools menu button. Click the adjustment icon that looks like a Gear in the upper-right corner. Click Internet Options in the drop-down menu The pop-up menu will show a variety of options, click the Security Tab On the security tab is a button that says Custom Level - click on it. This opens a Security Settings pop-up window, scroll down until you find the Scripts section. Choose to enable any site that has JavaScript. Press OK for Pop-up security settings, then Internet Options Pop-up Firefox Firefox does not have easy access to the button in JavaScript settings, but the process for turning JavaScript on/off is just as simple. Go to the URL and type about:config without quotation marks and press Enter. This brings a page with a prompt to click a button marked I'll be careful, I promise - click that button. This brings up a list of preferences, there is a toolbar at the top, type javascript on the toolbar and press enter This brings a set of results, go to it with javascript.enabled and double-click to change it to activate This is it, you can close it about: config tab without hitting OK, just close the window or type in a new page URL. Chrome Changing JavaScript settings in Chrome is pretty simple, but requires navigating some menus. Click the Three Vertical Line Hamburger icon in the upper-right corner. Find the label called Settings and click on it. On the Settings Page, scroll down and find the hyperlink with Show Advanced Settings... Click on it. Under the advanced settings, there is a button marked Content Settings... Click on it. This opens a pop-up window, scroll down until go to JavaScript Settings. Make sure that the slider is set to Allowed (recommended) For advanced users, managing exceptions allows the user to allow or not allow JavaScript on a single page. Opera Enable/disable JavaScript in Opera is also extremely simple. Click opera in the upper left corner Click settings menu this brings up a new Settings page, click Websites in the left navbar. Find the section labeled JavaScript, turn it on here. > Around Johannesburg Adega has become known for its traditional Portuguese hospitality, it is affordable, but remain largely up on now we take care not only of the Portuguese community, but also of many other cultures in South Africa, including the Muslim community. With a growing interest in European cuisine and neighbouring countries such as Mozambique, which was formerly a Portuguese colony, it was decided at the end of 2008 to introduce the concept to the people of Durban; The Gate of Adega was born. One of the differentiating factors for Adega, is that each output has its own character and feel. More specifically, two of our stores (Fordsburg and Gateway) are both Strictly Halaal and have gone a long way to bringing Portuguese hospitality to the Muslim community. They share many similarities, Portuguese and Muslim individuals both emphasize the celebration of food in the company of family and friends. Being a social and integral element for both cultures, the enjoyment of food and drink has brought the two cultures together as companions. As in Portugal, it's not uncommon to see Muslim people gathering around a plate of herds enjoying seafood, chicken or meat - and that's exactly what you'll see at Adega Gateway. Famed as travelers, Portuguese have brought influences from the world onto their kitchens, resulting in a fusion of kitchens. As a result, spices and flavors from all over Europe, the East and of course, Africa are now present in Portuguese cuisine. For example, some dishes even feature flavors from Moors (North African Muslims). You'll find that service standards are strictly adhered to at Adega Gateway - and to maintain these service levels, you'll notice that a standard 10% hosting fee is imposed on all accounts. There's no one at the door to greet you or sit down, the only recognition you receive for the first few minutes is a contemptuous glow from the till (at this point follow your first instinct and run). When you're finally seated by a selfless waiter you'll be hard pressed to find a place you don't a sticky patch up work there since you have tossed a menu without recommendations or further insite. When you get your food (which is really fast maybe too fast) the food will be laden with oil and lacking any depth. Unable to eat your food, listen to music, detach from the décor or chat with the waiter you will eventually look down and be greeted by resident insects. Once you receive the ridiculously high bill you will finally see the simle staff unsure if they are just happy to see you leave or happy that we have managed to irritate you in the horror show that is Adega. 1 KG QUEEN PRAWNS, 1 FULL SPRING CHICKEN, CHIPS ...
